TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

BULLY BLAINE.

He Puts in Some Solid Work Before the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Washington, 25.—Blaine said to the committee this morning that he had examined the diary of the late President, in which he had been in the habit, for years, of keeping a minute account of his daily transactions, and found neither Shillaber nor Harburt, the Cochran claims nor the Peruvian company mentioned; neither does his private secretary remember ever to have heard him mention them. None of these South American dispatches were prepared during the President's sickness. Blaine mentioned the fact of certain dispatches which were blocked out before the President was shot, but which remained in storage until after the succession of President Arthur. In explanation of President Garfield's views upon the subject Blaine said: President Garfield, in conversation with me, said Mr. Lincoln directed Secretary Seward to bring all foreign dispatches to him and not to the cabinet unless he so desired. Continued Blaine: From that time forward I never submitted anything to the cabinet which involved a permanent policy or change of policy, and no step which would involve a change of policy on the part of this government was ever taken by me without first submitting it to the President and receiving his entire approval and direction. Blaine alluded to the efforts which had been made to fix upon him (Blaine) the responsibility for a certain policy towards South American states, which was calculated to involve this country seriously, and continued: I don't desire to assume that President Arthur is responsible for any such effort; I acquit him entirely, but I desire all this time to place this matter before the committee correctly. Blaine then produced the original draft of instructions, which were given to Prescott, which he read, and pointed out the corrections which had been made by the President. Some of them at his (Blaine's) suggestion, and commented upon the corrections and their merits and demerits. He added, "I do not by any means find fault with the President for changing his mind, but this is the original draft of instructions to which President Arthur gave his assent, and which, following precedent, I keep. I desire to state most solemnly that the assumption that I ever intended to make a line or a syllable in the dispatch after it was agreed to by the President, is as false as the lie that was circulated over the country that I was, during the President's sickness, blocking out a foreign policy of my own."

At this point Belmont proceeded to propose a series of prepared questions, mainly directed to inquire into the policy of the department in the Chili-Peruvian trouble, and the instructions given to Prescott. Witness, in reply to a question, stated that he had never made an examination into the merits of the Cochran or Landreau claims. He had never considered the Landreau claim as adjudicated. Belmont then propounded a series of questions in regard to the terms "need officers" or "officially," and a somewhat lively tilt ensued between the examiner and the witness, which was suddenly brought to a climax by Blaine's remark, with some emphasis: "I hope, Mr. Belmont, you will be a gentleman. I shall be one, and shall treat you as such. I am not in a police court, to be badgered. I must answer my questions in my own way, and you must not undertake to correct me." Belmont disclaimed any lack of courtesy or desire to badger. He entertained the highest respect for witness.

The examination for some time pursued the direction of repartee and retort, the examiner persisting in putting his own construction upon the tenor of Blaine's dispatches, while the latter persistently insisted upon their meaning as written. Blaine, addressing the chairman, said: "I must confess this seems to me a very extraordinary examination." Witness then explained at some length just what instructions were given to Harburt in relation to the Landreau claim, that he should simply use his good office to secure a hearing for Landreau in the courts in Peru. I was an adventurous rough, added Blaine, to ask a foreign government to give an American a hearing in its courts. The case was most fairly arbitrated and the property has gone the way of the old world; England has gobbled the guano and a million tons of it are now advertised in London, worth probably $80,000,000. Blaine continued with much earnestness: "The English bondholders put up the job of war on Peru, and the United States took a mistaken view who speak of this war as a Chilean war. It was an English war on Peru, and I take the responsibility to set it right, and I dare to ask that a hearing be given to a humble citizen of a government that hardly dares to be out over night, and my foreign policy, to quote the expression, would have driven this country into war with Chile had it not been thwarted. Why, it is believed all over Chile that the United States got out in time to save a thrashing; that her hair-brained secretary of state was just about to involve her in war when she was saved by his removal, and we are laughed at and cartooned in their papers. A little gathering of 1,000,000 people on the west coast of South America would have given us a terrible thrashing, so we let the dismemberment of Peru go on and allowed England to bag the spoils, rising and adding with much emphasis: "History will hold the United States responsible for it."

The examination proceeded for some time, and lapsed into a continuous rattle of repartee and counter retort, which frequently convulsed the spectators with laughter, and left it a matter of some doubt which was the examiner, and which the witness. Blaine asserted that all over Chile that the United States got out in time to save a thrashing; that her hair-brained secretary of state was just about to involve her in war when she was saved by his removal, and we are laughed at and cartooned in their papers. A little gathering of 1,000,000 people on the west coast of South America would have given us a terrible thrashing, so we let the dismemberment of Peru go on and allowed England to bag the spoils, rising and adding with much emphasis: "History will hold the United States responsible for it."

Another Stairway.

New York, 25.—Tribune's Washington: Still another ironclad Cameron nomination, went to the Senate today, that of Andrew J. Kaufman, to be collector of internal revenue for the ninth district of Pennsylvania. Kaufman is one of the 306, having misrepresented almost the unanimous sentiment of Lancaster district by voting at Chicago for Grant.
